

Lic. Mayli Hayes Villalba / Collaborator Member

In love with animals since she was a child, and inspired by her mother's conservation work with Andean cats, Mayli decided that wildlife conservation was also her life's purpose. She has been volunteering in AGA activities since childhood. She earned a degree in Biology in 2018, and in 2019, she won a research grant from the Institute of Ecology. She is currently an environmental leader of the "Red O2" volunteer group, which makes strategic alliances with different citizen groups seeking improved quality of life. Mayli is also the citizen-science coordinator of the "Nuestros Vecinos Silvestres" (Our wild neighbors) project.
