

Dennis Xavier Huisa Balcon / Collaborator Member

Dennis studied Biological Sciences with a major in Ecology at the National University of the Puno Altiplano, where he holds a Master's Degree in Ecology and Environmental Management. He is fond of nature illustration, a fan of the high Andes flora, and enjoys giving lectures in the Quechua language. He participates in conservation projects for high Andean carnivores in the south of Peru. The Andean cat is his favorite because its peculiar characteristics make it unique in the Andes. Dennis works to prevent the traffic of wild fauna and currently acts as a forest control technician in the National Forestry Service and Wildlife-SERFOR.
